

Director of Security
4E-60 Hqs.

Although it is obvious that you are already concerned about first aid instruction for security duty officers, Mr. Coffey wants you to know that he endorses your efforts and suggests that all security duty officers take the OMS course.

The DD/S was pleased to note the attached. I am sending a copy to the Director of Security suggesting that all security duty officers be scheduled to enroll in the OMS first aid course. Perhaps it should also be offered to Signal Center and other employees working shifts.

The Office of Medical Services Training Officer is currently giving a first aid course to personnel of the Office of Security and the Watch Office. The course is being given for two hours each morning and two hours each afternoon in order to cover people who work the evening and night shifts. The course agenda includes mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, cardiac massage, use of the pneolator, and basic first aid. Sixteen students from the two components received instruction during the first week (13-17 November). This week four men from the Office of Security are receiving the same instruction.
